Mr. Colley:

Not to sound like a lawyer, but, it depends. As soon as the dendrite personnel get the site visit and assuming we can verify the account data, perhaps a couple of days, the rate limiting step is the site visit, thereafter it becomes a short turn around time with the QRA team.

Steve Lawrence is cc'd by Eric Brantley of the accounts who have hit their threshold, so Steve is information central.

In the new world order of phase two, there is planning around building in an early warning system when an account gets close to the threshold where the sales team will be notified and they will complete with the account the questionnaire to assess current needs. If justification for increases in the threshold can be validated then there will be an increase, subject to QRA review and in cases a QRA site visit to validate.

This process should reduce the instances in the future of customers hitting their order thresholds. The entire system will be customized to each account and to the quantities that it can professionally and legally justify.

Mr. Mone:

How long does it take to complete this process? A couple days or maybe a week? Who notifies sales once a store has had product ordering suspended?

Thanks

Mr. Colley:

My understanding is that the process has not changed substantially at this point such that Steve Lawrence or someone from his group will contact the account to advise of the visit. The customer is aware of the QRA decision by fax [January 4] that there will be a site visit. We sent this out to keep the customer informed that the situation is working to resolution.

I received notification from Dendrite this morning that the account has been added to their list for site visit.

Dendrite will be conducting surveys until the QRA team is at full capacity, however, some validations will be completed by QRA team members.

Carolyn,

We need to understand what the next steps are with this account. When will the consultant do the site visit and who is the consultant? Is it a CAH PBC or Dendrite? Also, is someone from your team calling the customer this AM to explain the situation? The point of contact at the store is [REDACTED]

Bill - This customer had a blocked order which is currently under investigation. I know that the team working on this will be contacting the customer shortly with some questions and a consultant will be conducting a site visit as well. Until the investigation is completed, the customer will not be able to order Oxycodone.

Carolyn,

Please review this account. They are getting limited on all oxycontins even though we are into a new month.

Hi guys

Please can you help us. Cost Less Purdy 14261 has been ordering Oxycontin (brand) in all strengths and we have been zeroing up until today. Looking in order history, it looks like we have filled Oxycontin on a few different blanks as of today.

Please can you check the blank below that was given to the driver today (you should get tomorrow) and let me know if we can fill this Oxycontin for them or what the issue is (maybe the limiters). Dont know what happened up until today but the customer needs this product desperately

Blank #077098109 1-2-08

Thanks Mar
